PODCAST 65 OVERVIEW – Grand Final PROBIZ Tryline special

The penultimate PROBIZ Tryline of the season is out now for your entertainment.

In this latest edition of the weekly podcast, stars who could have a major say in Saturday's Super League grand final give us their thoughts ahead of the big game at Old Trafford.

It's the final few had been predicting, but clearly St Helens and Leeds Rhinos hadn't read the script as they upset the appercart by beating Wigan and the League leaders' shield winners Warrington in their play-off semis.

Having said all that, neither club is a stranger to a grand final, with Saints having tasted defeat to the Warriors only 12 months ago at this stage of the competition.

They were also beaten in the three previous finals against you guessed it, Leeds Rhinos.

The season climate is previewed in the programme from a Rhinos perspective by experienced trio Danny McGuire, James Jones-Buchanan and Jamie Peacock.

The young and the older look ahead to the game from a St Helens standpoint as Jonny Lomax, Paul Wellens and James Roby offer up their views on what promises to be an exciting contest on Saturday evening.

Dave Hadfield from the Independent is also on hand to give a neutral assessment on battle between these two old rivals, as well as giving us his verdict on Rangi Chase' Man of Steel success and last weekend's championship grand finals.

You can hear the PROBIZ Tryline in a number of ways, including via iTunes and on the Independent's own website.

Alternatively you can find the podcast on a specially created website <http://www.probiztryline.net> which will give you access to the entire back catalogue in the weekly series.

The show's producers would also welcome your feedback on this year's programmes.
